

Listen Before You Decide

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

An open ear can sometimes take us further than the firmest conviction.

What does it mean?

Listening openly means giving another point of view our full attention. Listening does not mean agreeing at once. It simply gives our judgment a chance to become more complete.

A firm conviction can hide important questions in a money decision. An honest objection can reveal costs, risks or false assumptions. Listening first and then checking the facts can protect wealth from avoidable mistakes.

Put it into practice

- 01 Choose one money decision about which you have already formed a firm opinion.
- 02 Ask someone you trust for one objection to your decision.
- 03 Write down one point you will check before deciding.

YOUR TASK FOR TODAY

In five minutes, write down your opinion, one possible objection and one point you still want to check.

YOUR QUESTION

Which objection should you listen to today?
